TCS offers next-generation endpoint detection and response (EDR) antivirus that is based on the SentinelOne engine. Unlike traditional AV, next-generation AV (NGAV) identifies malicious activity using a system-centered, technical approach that examines every process on an endpoint. This allows next-gen AV to proactively detect and block the tools and tactics hackers use to gain entry. While traditional AV is focused on detecting malware at the endpoint alone, NGAV addresses a larger range of modern threats. By looking at the whole context rather than just isolated incidents, next-gen AV offers a more effective means of recognizing and deterring unknown malware and sophisticated attacks. Workstation management is also maintained through automated checks, patch management and asset tracking.

Director Schedule: Each time the work schedule for staff e-mail is sent out every two weeks it includes my schedule (subject to change) as well. I indicate when I expect to be in the library and at meetings/training/medical appointments. I will be out of the library (medical) after the APL meeting on Friday the 13th and should return to the library on Jan

18th. The Youth Services Librarian is in charge when the director is absent or the senior staff person on each shift. All staff know how to reach me (text, email, phone) and all know who to call in case of different emergencies (i.e. plumber, etc.). I will be out the afternoon of February 1 (medical) and I need to set up an appointment to be evaluated by an orthopedist.

Cataloging: Beth Bechtel from the Bridges Library System recently visited in Eagle and taught me how to download records from OCLC and the instructions for creating short records. I have been handling the cataloging of all items since Pat Whiteside left for medical reasons and then retired. I also purchase library materials and put “on order records” into the catalog for adult fiction and nonfiction.
